When buying
Toy Soldiers see that they — are W. Britain —

www.wbritain.com

Welcome to our 2015 Spring Catalogue Collection!

For over 120 years now W. Britain has been a leader in the metal toy soldier industry and continues to maintain that position. A lot has changed since the fully round hollow cast soldiers were produced in 1893, but our commitment to quality and authenticity has not.

As you read through this edition of our catalogue you will see that we have added many new figures to our most popular lines of matte finished historical miniatures. These newer styled figures and accessories are accurately mastered in 1/30th scale with each range designed to reflect a moment in time allowing collectors to set up anything from a small display to a large diorama.

Please do not despair if you don't see something from your favorite collection in this edition, as three more quarterly catalogues will follow in 2015.

Many new figures, accessories and vehicles are currently in development for all of our ranges, including our popular classic gloss finish. These newly designed traditional 54mm style figures are crafted in a pleasing style inspired by our figures from the past, but with historically correct details. Please note that many of our individual figures and figure sets are strictly limited editions and will be retired when sold out.

Glossary

You will notice two distinctly different types of figures in our catalogues, gloss finish and matte finish. The matte figures are 56/58mm-1/30 scale and are painted in a hyper-realistic style with shading and highlighting, all with a matte finish for an added touch of realism. The glossy figures are a true 54mm figure and are painted in the classic style with simple, neat painting finished in a high gloss lacquer.

Some images shown in this catalogue are prototypes. There may be minor variations in details during production.

56/58 mm-1/30 Scale

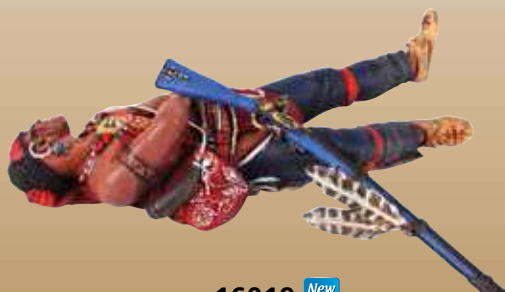

The Clash of Empires collection is inspired by events that took place on the Frontiers of Colonial North America from the 1750s to the 1790s. Each figure's appearance is based on the most recent research to accurately render the appearance of the soldiers, citizens and native peoples of this exciting period. As new releases for our American Revolution (1775–1783) collection are introduced they will be part of the Clash of Empires collection. Look for many new additions later this year.

Between 1803 and 1815, almost every European nation was involved in the struggle for dominance in Europe that would later become known as the Napoleonic Wars. For years, huge armies clashed across the continent with the balance of power shifting from campaign to campaign, but by 1814 the tides turned against Imperial France and Napoleon Bonaparte was sent into exile.

In March 1815, Napoleon returned to France and seized power, resurrected his Imperial army. A new coalition of states was formed to oppose his return to power and their armies were mobilized to invade France. Napoleon chose to attack two large forces under Wellington and Blücher assembled in Belgium near his north-eastern border with the hope to destroy these armies before other members of the coalition could join in a coordinated invasion of France.

The French Imperial army marched into Belgium meeting and defeating the Prussian army under Blücher at the battle of Ligny on June 16th.

Two days, later the French army engaged the Anglo-Dutch army under Wellington on the rolling farms fields of Waterloo, Belgium. Wellington's army withstood repeated attacks by the French in a defensive mode, until, in the evening, the Prussians arrived in force and broke through Napoleon's right flank. At that moment, Wellington's Anglo-allied army counter-attacked and drove the French army in disorder from the field defeating Napoleon and ending his rule as Emperor of the French.

The American Civil War, or the War Between the States, was fought between 1861 and 1865. It was perhaps one of the most defining and tragic chapters in American history. It was also known as one of the first 'modern wars' with a grim preview of what was to come in future conflicts, well documented in both text and imagery.

W. Britain continues to develop one of the most accurate and comprehensive collections of American Civil War figures and accessories currently available in this ever growing collection.

Our Anglo-Zulu War series was first released in 2007 focusing on the defense of the mission station at Rorke's Drift on January 22, 1879 where a handful of British soldiers held out against an overwhelming force of Zulu warriors. The series later expanded to include elements to recreate the Battle of Isandlwana and the destruction of a large British force invading Zululand in South Africa.

The buildings, equipment, accessories and personalities involved in both engagements have been researched and meticulously modeled to enable the collector to recreate entire battles or small vignettes. Look for more additions to this popular range later this year.

The First World War of 1914 -1918 ended the Edwardian Era of optimism and laid the groundwork for the balance of the twentieth century. Although civilization had experienced worldwide conflicts in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, massive industrialization and new technologies created unprecedented casualties and destruction beyond expectation. Looking back now, it is easy to see that The First World War was only the first chapter in a series of terrible conflicts that marked the twentieth century. Several new additions have been added to our ever growing selection of figures and accessories representing the "War to End All Wars."

Airpower was an important factor in all theatres of World War II. The Royal Air Force was instrumental in home defense and carrying the war into Europe and flew its first strategic bombing raid on Germany on 15 May 1940. In 1942, the United States Army Air Forces (USAAF) arrived in the UK and began to carry out "precision bombing" on locations vital to the German war machine. By April of 1944 the combined might of the RAF and USAAF were well on the way to achieving air superiority over all of Europe. Our growing collection acknowledges the contributions of the men and women of the Allied air arm in World War II.

"Pressed For Service" - British Royal Navy Press Gang, 1805-1815
4 Piece Set
Limited Edition of 400 Sets

Our Jack Tars & Leathernecks collection features both Marines and Naval personnel of Great Britain and the United States. As the collection grows we will include most of the great powers that had a significant presence on the high seas.

Our newest set represents the ever present problem of manning the ships of the Royal Navy in the eighteenth and nineteenth century. Impressment, or being seized for service, was used as far back as Elizabethan times. With the growing tension in Europe Quota Acts were passed to supplement recruitment to the navy, but impressment into service was still aggressively used. The need for manpower during the Napoleonic Wars of 1803 -1815 included the taking of American citizens that may have worked on British merchant ships or had married a British woman. Officially, no foreigner could be impressed however, these limits were often ignored and the impressment of Americans into the British navy became one of the main causes of the American War of 1812.

At 2:40 A.M. April 15, 1912, the unthinkable had happened. The 'unsinkable' White Star flag ship, RMS Titanic, slipped beneath the waves and into history.

The Titanic had been the largest ship afloat at the time and was considered a masterpiece of design in White Stars Olympic class of ocean liners. On this maiden voyage from Southampton to New York, she carried 2,224 passengers and crew. Just two hours after the Titanic foundered, the Cunard liner RMS Carpathia arrived on the scene of the sinking, where she brought aboard an estimated 705 survivors.

More than 1,500 people died in one of the deadliest peacetime maritime disasters in modern history and the disaster was greeted with worldwide shock and outrage at this huge loss of life. Even before the survivors arrived in New York aboard the Carpathia, investigations were planned to discover how this could have happened and what could be done to prevent a similar disaster in the future.

The Carpathia's arrival in New York led to a frenzy of press interest, with newspapers competing to be the first to report the survivor's stories. Newspaper reporters schemed and bribed to get the first news, with at least one boarding the rescue ship before it docked.

Crowds gathered outside newspaper offices to see the latest reports being posted in the windows or on the billboards. It took another four days before a relatively complete list of casualties could be compiled and published, adding to the agony of the relatives waiting for news of those who had been aboard the Titanic.

The Titanic's collision with an iceberg in the North Atlantic signaled an end to an era. The thought that anything was possible and that man and industry could design machines that could challenge nature itself, was now in question.

Our Redcoats & Bluecoats are designed as the next generation of the old classic gloss toy soldiers. These true 54mm figures feature realistic details with historically accurate uniforms and equipment.

These French Marines represent the Colonial troops garrisoning small outposts in the New World. Using correct poses from 18th century military manuals, you can display a section, platoon or even a full company.
