A HISTOREX horse is composed of two body halves, a head, mane, tail and forelock. We have numbered the different parts, putting the head first, then the left half and finally the right half. By combining the different halves it is possible to make up a horse in many different positions. Some examples are shown opposite of the four basic positions — Standing, walking, trotting, galloping. Heads are suitable for any combination of the horse halves with the exception of No.6.

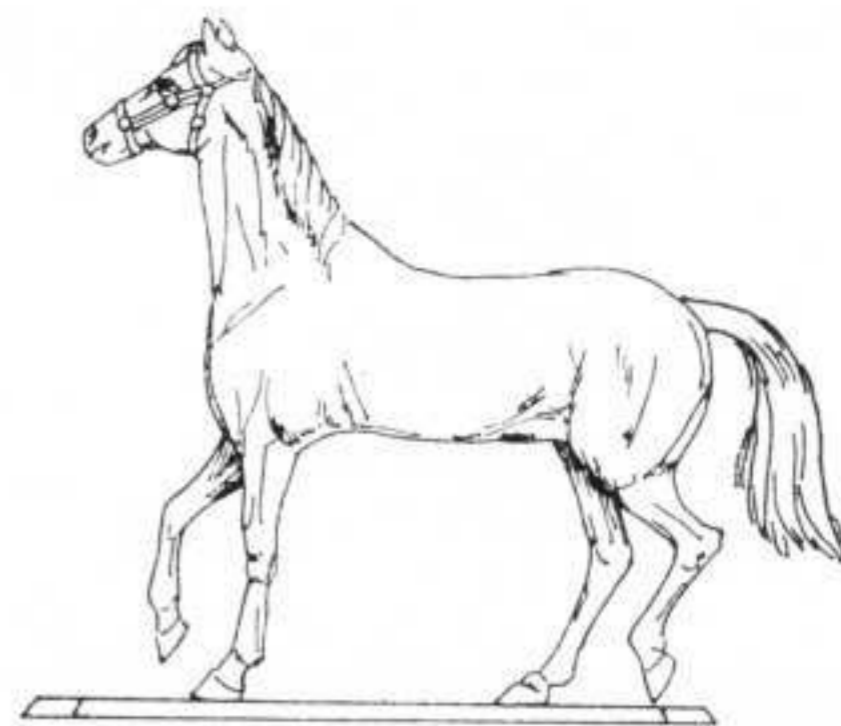

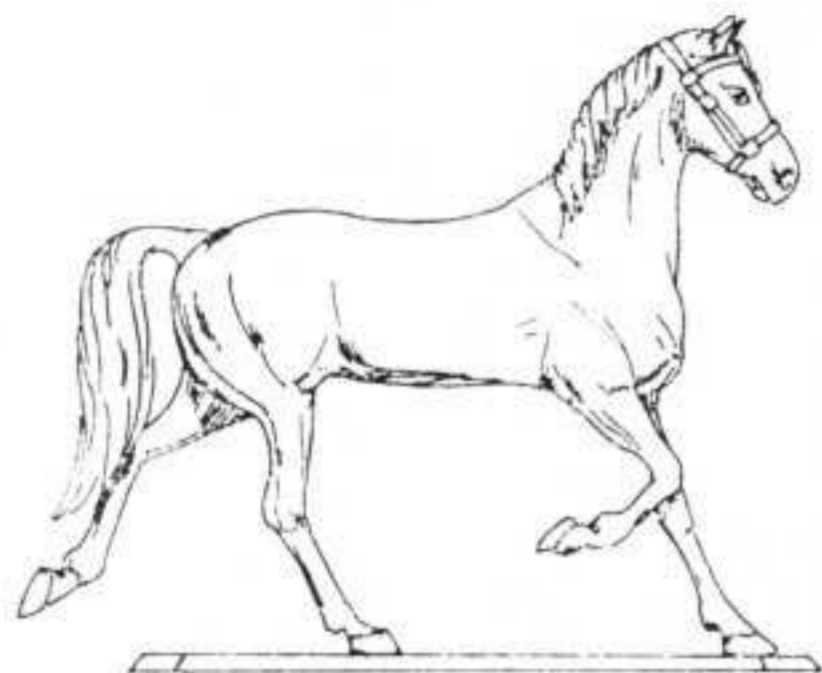

Example of standing horse — 4.3.4.
